The Post-COVID Healthcare Landscape: Implications for Strategy
Thursday, July 23, 2020 • 1:00 p.m. - 2:00 p.m.

What will the United States health system look like post-COVID-19? Hospitals and health systems are now facing the long-term financial impact of a pandemic-related economic slowdown, as well as dealing with the political uncertainties created by the 2020 national election.

Organizational leaders will also face the continued threat of disruption from new technologies and competitors. JEFF GOLDSMITH, President of Health Futures, will share the most significant threats and opportunities in this post-COVID landscape, and discuss ways that health system boards and leadership can set strategic priorities for this uncertain near-term future.

Mr. Goldsmith has lectured on health services management and policy in the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago, at the Wharton School of Finance, Johns Hopkins, Washington University, and the University of California at Berkeley. His interests include biotechnology, health policy, international health systems, and the future of health services.

Mr. Goldsmith has served as National Advisor for Healthcare for Ernst and Young and provided strategy consulting to a wide variety of healthcare systems, health plans, supply and technology firms.
